

Are you ready to make the big move?

There's more to it than paying rent—living on your own creates new expenses that you may not have considered, such as rental insurance, commuting expenses and furnishing your new place. Here are a number of things to consider as you plan for your big move.

BUILD A BUDGET

You will need a budget before you move. It's the only way to understand what you can afford, and it will help you make sense of all the expenses that come with your new independence.

If you're just starting out, a spending ratio, like the one below, can help you evaluate your spending habits and understand what you can and can't afford.

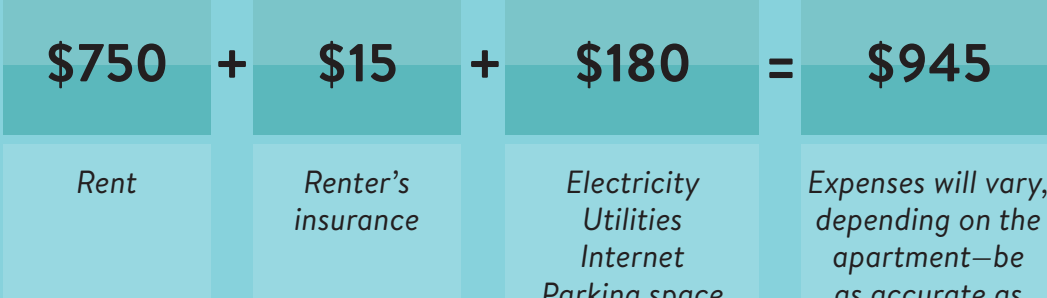

Spending ratios are a general guide. Categories can be added to better reflect your personal situation. For example, students will need to factor tuition and textbooks into their spending ratio.

HOW MUCH RENT CAN YOU AFFORD?

Using the sample ratio above as a starting point, you can do a quick calculation to see what's in your price range.

CALCULATE YOUR HOUSING SPENDING RATIO

Add up your regular household expenses

Divide the result by your monthly net income

FIRST APARTMENT REALITY CHECK

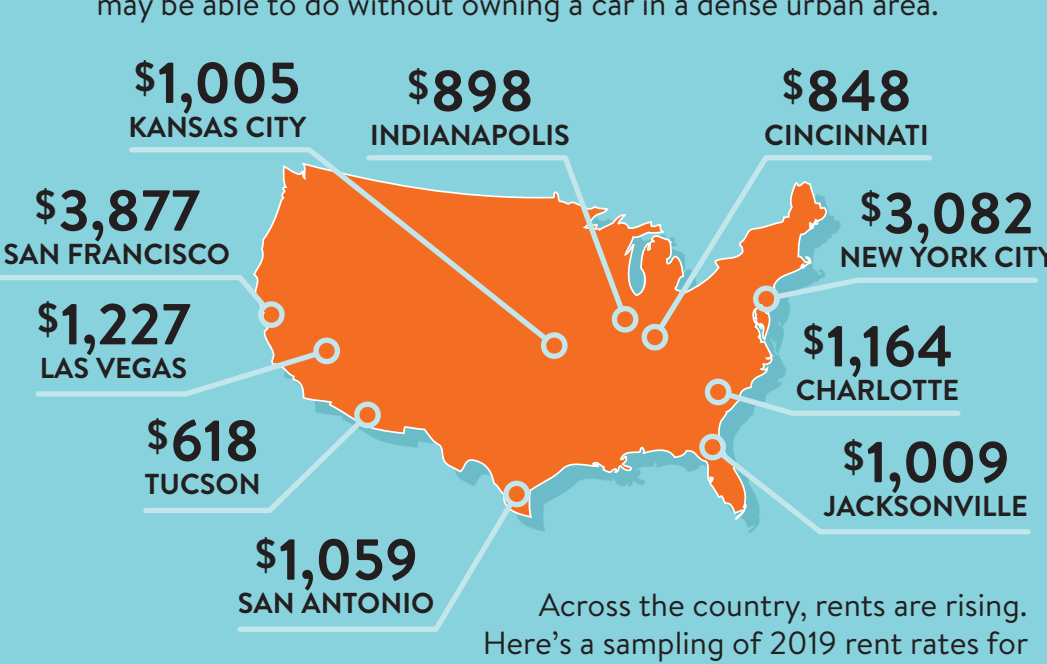

What happens when you find an apartment you love, but it's way outside your spending ratio?

- Increase your income Is the apartment you found worth taking on a second job or working longer hours?
- Reconsider your "must-haves" Be realistic about your expectations, especially if it's your first time living on your own; compare many different apartments to understand how much more that extra square footage or that view will cost you
- Reduce other spending areas In some cases, you can justify a higher housing spending ratio if it reduces (or eliminates) another spending category; for example, an apartment near work or school can reduce your monthly transportation costs
- Share the space Taking on a roommate can give you access to that dream apartment for less money
- Look in a different location Rental rates vary widely across the country; check out the pricing in nearby suburbs and cities to see if a move would make sense in the long run

AVERAGE RENT ACROSS THE COUNTRY

Housing costs in certain geographic areas, such as the San Francisco Bay Area and New York, are very high. If your spending ratio is a few percentage points above 30 for housing, you're OK.

But when it starts climbing over 45%, you should probably re-evaluate where you live, consider living with a roommate or look at saving in other areas, such as transportation. For instance, you may be able to do without owning a car in a dense urban area.

Across the country, rents are rising. Here's a sampling of 2019 rent rates for a one-bedroom apartment in 10 metropolitan areas throughout the United States. Rent will be cheaper in the suburbs and rural areas.

MORE THAN JUST THE RENT CHECK

When taking your total housing costs into consideration, be sure to look past your rent payment. Here are a few items to take into consideration. Depending on your situation, there may be other expenses to consider.

ONE-TIME EXPENSES

ONGOING EXPENSES

SAVE UP BEFORE MAKING THE LEAP

Just because you have a steady job and your housing spending ratio is in line, that doesn't mean you're done just yet. You will need to have a few thousand dollars saved up prior to making the final leap to renting your first apartment.

You'll likely be subjected to a background and credit check—which you're often charged for, to the tune of $50 to $100, depending on the management company

Scoring an apartment means putting down a security deposit—also known as the last month's rent

First month's rent	$ 750
Security deposit	$ 750
Background & credit check	$ 100
Moving costs	$ 500
Starter furniture	$ 1,000
Miscellaneous	$ 1,000
Total	$ 4,100

Don't overlook this expense—price out renting a moving truck versus a full-service move and don't forget boxes, tape and other supplies; if you have access to a pickup truck and willing friends, you may be able to save some money

Your first apartment doesn't need to be a palace—spend an amount that you're comfortable with on furniture, and remember that, aside from the basics, you don't need to buy everything all at once; consider visiting thrift shops intermittently; end tables, lamps, bookshelves and the like can be purchased gradually—so think of furniture as a recurring expense for the first year, rather than as one lump sum

This is a rough example only. Amounts will vary, depending on where you are moving or how far you are moving.

Be sure to have enough set aside for other miscellaneous expenses including utility deposits, renter's insurance and basic cleaning supplies

BROUGHT TO YOU BY

Sources: Consolidated Credit Counseling Services, Forbes, Moveln, Inc., MyFirstApartment.com